Graffiti mecca to face wrecking ball

Paint by numbers. The famous 5Pointz hot spot will soon make way for a major Long Island City development.

The New York City Council on Wednesday voted unanimously to approve a plan to turn 5Pointz, the colorful graffiti mecca in Long Island City, into a two-tower, $400 million redevelopment project.

The warehouses that make up 5Pointz, covered in spray paint many layers thick, could be razed as soon as the end of the year. For graffiti artists around the world, the demolition will be a sad day.

City Councilman Jimmy Van Bramer, the Queens Democrat who represents Long Island City, stressed there was no way 5Pointz could have been saved.

"It's a privately owned lot," he said.

Negotiations with the Wolkoff family, the owners of the site, were focused on preserving the artistic legacy of 5Pointz and on how the project would improve Long Island City, he said.

Last week, the Wolkoffs agreed to triple the number of affordable housing units to 210 from 75, out of 1,000 units.

Graffiti artist Chayenne Chaka was at 5Pointz working on a mural even as the council voted. He was one of many artists who have made the pilgrimage to 5Pointz.

"Something like this isn't just a building," he said. "It's a piece of history."

Building details

The buildings will also include space for art studios, and the artists who have been displaced from the 5Pointz warehouses will be given priority access.

- About 10,000 square feet of wall space, most of it along Davis Street edge, will be designated for aerosol art.
- The project will include 32,100 feet of public space as well as a park.

Heart of the matter

"The issue here was to get the best deal we could for the neighborhood."

Staten Island Ferry service to increase

Getting to Staten Island might become a whole lot easier if the City Council has their way.

The council voted yesterday in favor of increasing Staten Island Ferry service to every half hour, seven days a week, by May 2015.

Service frequency would increase unless the next mayor and Department of Transportation determine the change isn't economically feasible.

"For far too long Staten Islanders have been on a sort of city-enforced curfew as they planned their forays into Manhattan around the unforgiving ferry schedule," Staten Island Councilman James Oddo said.

Boy fatally struck near Prospect Park

A boy chasing a ball into a street was struck and killed by a van near Prospect Park early Tuesday night, police said.

Samuel Cohen-Eckstein, 12, was playing near his home on Prospect Park West in Park Slope when his ball rolled into the street at about 5:15 p.m., police said.

Running into the street to retrieve the ball, he was struck by a white Chevrolet van.

Emergency personnel transported Cohen-Eckstein to Methodist Hospital, where he later died.

The driver of the van remained at the scene. ANNA SANDERS

Cops searching for $1 million missing painting

The Norman Rockwell painting "Sport," painted in 1939, has disappeared. / NYPD

Police are on the hunt for a famous Norman Rockwell painting that sold for more than $1 million at a May auction and disappeared from a Queens warehouse last month.

"Sport" was discovered missing from Welpak Art Moving and Storage in Maspeth on Sept. 13 at 7 p.m., police said. The NYPD is searching for clues about how the painting was removed from the warehouse.

The painting, featuring a fisherman in a boat wearing a yellow raincoat, was sold by a private collector for $1,085,000 at a Sotheby's auction in May. The identity of the current owner was not revealed by police. Rockwell completed the work in 1939. The painting was used as a Saturday Evening Post cover and was signed by Rockwell.

Police ask anyone with information on the painting's whereabouts to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477).

Details

The oil-on-canvas painting is 22 by 28 inches. "Sport" was in a golden wooden frame when it was stolen.

JOHN YAEGER

MAN ON A MISSION

You've seen Citi Bikes around New York, but have you seen the Citibiker? John Yaeger has been on a personal mission to track down the first 100 Citi Bikes (each bike has an ID number) and take a photo with all 100. The Citibiker documents his journey on Facebook, Twitter and Tumblr, and so far he's about three-quarters of the way done. Of course, the fewer Citi Bikes there are left, the harder they are to find among the thousands of Citi Bikes in New York. Yaeger talked to Metro about his journey and the adventures he's had along the way.

His mission

I started on June 9. The first bike I came across was Bike 85, so I thought, "I wonder how hard it would be to find the first 100." On June 15, a girl from Italy stopped me and saw what I was doing and she said, "Oh, can I follow you? I live in Italy — how will I know how you do?" So it still took me some time to get online and really post anything but I started posting and like anyone else, I didn't feel so photogenic. I was just taking photos because I thought it was just me and a bike. But people notice what you wear so I've been paying attention to that: I have different New York shirts and I wanted to wear things to promote New York. It hasn't been easy. I think I now have 75 or 76 bikes of the 100 but it's harder and harder to find the ones that I'm looking for.

Were you a fan of Citi Bike before you started tracking the bikes?

I heard about the program in early May. My office had just moved and I used to be able to walk, but I had to find some other way to get to work. I saw a billboard that said "Citi Bike is coming — text for more info," so I did and it said when it was first coming online, which was the first week of June. I tried it out a few times, but when I got the key I started becoming a regular commuter.

Do you have any funny stories from your hunt?

There have been times I'm headed up the Manhattan or Brooklyn Bridge and someone passes and I have to turn around and catch up to them. I try to have a story behind each photo. I was on Second Avenue when I spotted a guy riding Bike 24 and it took me more than two blocks to catch up to him. He kept biking because I think he thought I was out for a run, but when I caught up and explained what I was doing, he was like, "Oh, you're doing a scavenger hunt — that's so cool," and I said, "Yeah, but you're on the bike!" and then he finally got what I was trying to do and let me take the picture.

Bonus question

Does Citi Bike know you're doing this?

They actually sent me a letter back in the first week of August and they said, "Hey, we saw what you're doing and thanks for being positive about the program." It was a handwritten letter, too. They included a few coupons for week shares to share with other people, so that was nice.

Willets Point will undergo face-lift

The Willet Points area will receive new shops, apartments and a hotel as part of the plan. / COURTESY OF THE MAYOR'S OFFICE

Transformation. The industrial area around Citi Field will undergo a $3 billion redevelopment.

Once known as the "valley of ashes," the much-contested Willets Point will be transformed into a complex of retail space, a hotel and residential apartments under a bill passed by City Council Wednesday.

The $3 billion redevelopment plan, headed by Related Co. and Sterling Industries, will inched a 1.4 million square-foot mall next to Citi Field.

Though community members have fought the proposal for several months,

Mayor Michael Bloomberg applauded the bill's passage in a statement, calling it a "critical milestone."

The plan was passed after negotiations with Queens Councilwoman Julissa Ferreras, who pledged her support after certain concessions were made.

The administration will pay $15.5 million to relocate businesses in Willets Point.

The project is expected to create 7,100 permanent jobs and 12,000 construction jobs.

Analysis

Details of the new project

As part of the agreement, 872 new affordable housing units will be part of the first phase project.

The developers have also agreed to fund a new nonprofit alliance, The Flushing Meadows Corona Park Alliance, with $15 million to upkeep the nearby park. The developers will also work with authorities to build a new K-8 school and community facilities, including a library, day care center and public plaza. Environmental remediation agreements, including the construction of a rooftop farm and greenhouse on the mall, were also made.

Welcome change

"After many long years of reviewing this proposal and taking my district's needs into account, I am confident that this development will be a win for my constituents." Julissa Ferreras

Four arrested in murder of teen

Kenny Chen / FACEBOOK

A police investigation spanning several months finally turned up four suspects in connection with the fatal stabbing of 17-year-old Kenny Chen.

Chen was found at 3:46 a.m. unconscious and bleeding just steps from his family's home on June 9. At the time witnesses reported seeing four men fleeing from that spot shortly before police arrived, an NYPD spokesperson confirmed.

Chen had received a call on his cell phone that prompted him to step outside shortly before he was stabbed, police said.

Police used phone records and witness interviews to track that call to the four teens arrested on Tuesday, they said.

Queens teen Peter Sedeno, 17, was charged with murder in the second degree and gang assault. Daquan Jackson, Dayshawn Young and Daine Daley were all charged with gang assault in the first and second degree.

Police said the four teens had arranged to meet Chen in front of his house. They believe a verbal dispute escalated into violence.

Obama picks Yellen to be head of Fed

First female. The nomination will put Yellen on course to be the first woman to lead the institution.

President Barack Obama nominated Federal Reserve Vice Chair Janet Yellen yesterday to run the world's most influential central bank and urged the Senate to confirm her without delay.

Yellen, an advocate for aggressive action to stimulate U.S. economic growth through low interest rates and large-scale bond purchases, would replace Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke, whose second term ends on Jan. 31.

"Janet is exceptionally well qualified for this role," Obama said at a White House ceremony, with a beaming Yellen standing by his side. "She doesn't have a crystal ball, but what she does have is a keen understanding about how markets and the economy work, not just in theory but also in the real world. And she calls it like she sees it."

If confirmed by the U.S. Senate, which is expected to endorse her despite opposition from some Republicans, Yellen would provide continuity with policies under Bernanke. She would likely move cautiously in reining in monetary stimulus put in place to shore up the world's largest economy.

Yellen, who spoke briefly after Obama, said she would promote maximum employment, stable prices and a sound financial system.

She said there was more to do to ensure people who were out of work can find jobs. REUTERS

"The mandate of the Federal Reserve is to serve all the American people, and too many Americans still can't find a job and worry how they'll pay their bills and provide for their families." Yellen

Members of Congress seeing signs of hope in fiscal impasse

Risky. The impasse has rattled markets with the threat that borrowing limit will not be raised.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid walks to the news conference on the Senate steps to call on House Republicans to end the government shutdown yesterday. / GETTY IMAGES

Republicans and Democrats in Congress saw signs of hope yesterday for a break in their fiscal impasse, as members of both parties floated the possibility of a short-term increase in the debt limit to allow time for broader negotiations on the budget.

The slight shift in tone was aided by a column by House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, who urged a negotiated end to the stalemate but did not mention Republican demands for linking changes in the federal health care law with government funding.

"Right now, we need to find common ground," Ryan, the party's 2012 vice presidential nominee who had been largely silent in the confrontation, wrote in the Wall Street Journal.

President Barack Obama scolded Republicans on Tuesday for threatening economic chaos, but said he would talk about anything including the health care law if Republicans re-opened the government and lifted the debt ceiling even for the short term.

House of Representatives Speaker John Boehner rejected that idea as "unconditional surrender," but other Republicans have showed a willingness to consider a short-term deal if there was a framework in place for negotiations.

A House Republican leadership aide confirmed that a short-term debt limit increase was under discussion. House Republican leaders plan to make remarks to reporters tomorrow at around 11 a.m., but it was not clear whether they would unveil a plan then. It also was unclear whether any Republican short-term debt limit increase would contain new deficit-reduction or other policy proposals that Obama has warned against attaching to any such measure.

Republican Tea Party fiscal conservatives precipitated the crisis by demanding that Obama's healthcare reform law be delayed or curtailed in exchange for approving the funding of government operations and raising the debt ceiling. REUTERS

GOP blame

62%

An Associated Press-GfK survey yesterday found 62 percent of Americans mostly blamed Republicans, who also bore public blame after the government shutdown in 1996.

5%

They gave Congress, as a whole, a rock-bottom 5 percent approval rating.

Families of soldiers

Obama seeks fix for stalled military death benefits.

President Barack Obama directed government lawyers to find an immediate fix for stalled aid for the families of soldiers killed in the line of duty during the government shutdown, White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters yesterday.

Obama signed a law just before the shutdown allowing the Pentagon to pay the military, but lawyers said the bill did not permit the government to pay a $100,000 tax-free payment to families of fallen troops during the impasse.

At least five families of soldiers killed last weekend in Afghanistan were affected by the suspension.

Top billing

House GOP to meet Obama today at White House

President Barack Obama will sit down today with some of his main adversaries in the fight over raising the U.S. debt ceiling and ending a government shutdown, meeting with Republicans who control the House of Representatives.

A spokesman for House Speaker John Boehner, the top U.S. Republican in Washington, said Boehner, his deputy, Eric Cantor, and various other House Republicans will meet with Obama.

Political prestige

High stakes for Putin as his Olympic dream nears

Russian President Vladimir Putin has staked his personal and political prestige on February's Winter Olympics in the city of Sochi, yet despite the $50-billion price tag the Games could still be an embarrassing flop.

Putin handles a torch of the Olympic Flame. / GETTY IMAGES

If all goes to plan, the costliest Games in history will be a showcase for Russia's achievements under Putin, the vindication of a six-year vanity project on a truly Soviet scale.

But his dream could yet be shattered: if venues on the subtropical Black Sea are not ready on time, if protests break out over a new Russian law that critics say targets gay rights, or if Chechen or other Islamist militants attack the Games.

Four months before the Games open on Feb. 7, cranes still tower over muddy construction sites, freshly laid pipes lie exposed to the weather and walkways are churned up around them. At ski resorts above the seaside city, huge segments of metal piping and cable lie strewn around near hotels.

The blow to Putin's pride and political standing would be immense if the Games fail because he has invested so much personally in what some see as the folly of turning a palm-lined summer beach resort into a 21st-century winter sports hub. REUTERS

Morsi faces trial as US reviews aid

Held. If brought before the court, it would be his first public appearance since he was ousted.

Morsi / GETTY IMAGES

Egypt's ousted President Mohamed Morsi will stand trial on Nov. 4 on charges of inciting the killing of protesters, a prospect sure to raise concern in Washington, already considering cutting aid as a way to urge Cairo to restore democracy.

The trial could further inflame tensions between the Muslim Brotherhood and the army-backed government and deepen the political instability that has decimated tourism and investment in the most populous Arab state.

The upheaval worries Cairo's Western allies, who were hoping the uprising that ended Hosni Mubarak's 30-year rule would turn the region's biggest country into a democratic success story.

The United States and European Union had wanted an inclusive political process in Egypt, which has a peace treaty with Israel and controls the Suez Canal waterway between Europe and Asia.

Morsi, Egypt's first freely elected president, and other Brotherhood leaders accuse the army of staging a coup that reversed the gains of the 2011 revolt against Mubarak.

The United States is leaning toward withholding most military aid to Egypt except to promote counter-terrorism, security in the Sinai Peninsula that borders Israel, and other such priorities, a U.S. official said. REUTERS

US allows families of embassy staff back to Beirut

The U.S. State Department yesterday said that family members of its embassy staff in Beirut may return to Lebanon, in a sign the volatile security environment has improved.

The department last week allowed non-essential personnel, who had been evacuated last month because of unspecified threats, to return to U.S. Embassy in Beirut. REUTERS

‘Electric’ ladies first

R&B. Janelle Monae pays homage to pioneering women on her new album.

Though Janelle Monae sometimes seems absorbed in a futuristic world of androids and clones, she pays homage in song to two real-life female groundbreakers on her second studio album, “The Electric Lady”: astronaut Sally Ride and actress Dorothy Dandridge.

“‘The Electric Lady’ [refers to] the ladies who are out there in this world and should be respected,” Monae says.

In 1954 Dandridge was the first African American to be nominated for an Academy Award for best actress, for her role in “Carmen Jones.” Monae extols the virtues of the actress in the jazzy “Dorothy Dandridge Eyes.”

Ride’s service on the crew of the space shuttle Challenger in 1983 made her the first American woman in space. Monae’s “Sally Ride” is a rocking ballad with searing guitar, an appropriate tribute.

“She was definitely working as an astronaut during a time when women were not being accepted; she was the minority,” Monae says of Ride, who passed away last year. “I thought it was important to pay homage to her and tell her story, and also she was in a same-sex relationship for a while ... and [back then] women who were in same-sex relationships would definitely be fired or discriminated against because of their sexual orientation.”

It’s all part of the “Electric Lady” concept.

“It’s important to show female appreciation,” Monae says. “You don’t have to necessarily be sexually attracted to a women to appreciate her or to value her.”

Monae is a Kansas City-born, Atlanta-raised chanteuse who gained the support of OutKast’s Big Boi and Sean Combs to emerge as a solo artist with 2007’s “Metropolis: Suite I (The Chase).” “The ArchAndroid,” her 2010 album, saw her profile rise, as did her contribution to the fun. smash “We Are Young.” Being named as a CoverGirl spokeswoman didn’t hurt her profile either.

“The Electric Lady,” which debuted at No. 5 on Billboard’s album chart last month, features guests Prince, Erykah Badu, Miguel, Solange and Esperanza Spalding. It’s a happy swirl of R&B, disco, torchy ballads, rock ‘n’ roll and soul microwaved in a time machine. She’s now taking the show on the road.

“It’s going to be an interactive experience,” Monae says of the live show. “There are going to be lots of androids from Metropolis who are going to time travel and you’ll get a chance to meet them.”

Another Kardashian divorce?

It looks like 2013 is the year of the Kardashian marriage breakdown. First up, of course, was Bruce and Kris Jenner announcing their separation on Tuesday. But that's already old news. It looks like Khloe Kardashian and Lamar Odom will soon be following in their footsteps. TMZ.com reports that Khloe wants a divorce and is "anxious" to end it, but hasn't because of Odom's fragile state.

No matter what the ending, it looks like it will be an "easy" divorce — they have an iron-tight prenup which keeps the assets of the couple separate. The Kardashians may be many things (the horsemen of the apocalypse, sellouts, attractive) but dummies about money is not one of them.

Wilson gets around

Move over Simon Cowell, there is a new siring stallion of Hollywood. And surprisingly, it's none other than Owen Wilson.

The actor is reportedly becoming a father or the second time — but this time with his personal trainer, who recently filed for divorce, according to the National Enquirer. Trainer Caroline Lindqvist has reportedly been separated from her husband, plastic surgeon Ritu Chopra, for more than a year but did not file for divorce until learning she was carrying Wilson's child.

"Caroline broke the news to Owen this past May shortly after confirming that he was the father," a source says. "A few days later, she filed for divorce from her husband." The baby is said to be due in January.

She won't put that tongue away, will she?

Bow Wow catfishing is Bow Wow approved

The economy is crap. Our government can't function. Global warming is going to destroy us all.

But look on the bright side: At least we live in era of catfishing.

I realize that is a terribly callous thing to say. Being catfished no doubt feels awful. I don't care. This makes me really happy.

So here's the deal. On this week's "Catfish," an astute young woman named Keyonnah began an online relationship with rapper Bow Wow. He refused to video chat with her, but they exchanged text messages and he sent her $10,000 in gifts. But — shocker — the man who refused to meet her in person was actually not a famous rapper, but a woman named Dee who liked to lure in chicks by using Bow Wow's likeness because she "liked a challenge."

The best part of this, however, is that Bow Wow himself is super into it. "I feel honored," he said in a reaction video posted by his BET show "106 & Park." "It's dope and it's fly when someone wants to be you. And not only they wanna be you, in their mind they are you. That's crazy. But I like it. It's free promo for myself."

Bow Wow went on to invite both Dee and Keyonnah to come hang out with him, which is probably a much happier ending than catfishings usually have. METRO, MELINDA TAUB

Talking points

Radcliffe on getting naked

Daniel Radcliffe is not surprised about the reaction his steamy same-sex love scene in "Kill Your Darlings" is getting. "It's quite an easy headline, I guess particularly for British papers. There's a lot of jokes to be made," he tells Katie Couric in an interview.

O'Connor won't stop writing

After Sinead O'Connor's third open letter to Miley Cyrus, the "Wrecking Ball" singer dismissed the Irish entertainer with, "You can write as many open letters as you want." Well, be careful what you wish for. O'Connor has released her fourth letter. "You again refer to me as 'crazy' — that you don't understand why I have been upset with you. I find that hard to understand, frankly, since you're clearly very far from being a stupid woman," O'Connor writes. "Please apologize to myself and Amanda Bynes for having perpetuated abuse of both of us."

Adapting is such sweet sorrow

Interview.
"Downton Abbey" creator Julian Fellowes takes on "Romeo and Juliet."

Between what he's put the couples through on "Downton Abbey" and now taking on "Romeo and Juliet" — coming out Friday, with "True Grit"'s Hailee Steinfeld and Douglas Booth — you'd be forgiven for assuming writer Julian Fellowes is more than a little obsessed with doomed, tragic love. And he'd admit you're onto something — but it's not his fault, he swears.

"This whole business of love ending in death, I grew up on it," he says. "I mean, you remember those songs — 'Tell Laura I Love Her' and 'Leader of the Pack' and 'Terry.' They all ended up with the guy dying on the motorbike or being smashed in the car race or whatever. And that was really my adolescent culture. So in a way I got there before 'Twilight.'"

Besides, Fellowes insists he's just giving audiences what they want. "There is something about the ultimate sacrifice to preserve your love, which is completely pure and takes over your life, that we all find very appealing — perhaps because it's a sort of ideal that most of us don't live up to," he says of the enduring appeal of Shakespeare's romantic tragedy. "There is a moment in some incredibly unhappy pursuit where most of us think, 'Oh, the hell with it,' and then we just go home. But what we love about these lovers is that they don't think that. They go all the way and in the end they would rather die than be apart. It somehow chimes with the memory of first love and early love, which we've all been through."

And when he says "we all," he's including himself in that equation. "I suppose I respond to that as much as anyone else does, really. Odd as it may seem looking at this porky old fellow, bald and fat, once inside there was a lover."

That does leave one nagging question though: With so many previous adaptations of the Bard's love story — and especially with Franco Zeffirelli's definitive 1968 edition and Baz Luhrmann's more experimental 1996 entry — why does the world need yet another?

"There are certain stories that won't die, and they just continually get reinvented," Fellowes explains. "Sometimes ['Romeo and Juliet' has] been turned into modern musicals about the back streets of New York or it's been made modern and set in an ice rink or it's in an underground garage or everyone's in Nazi uniforms. But the point is we keep going back to it. It touches something at our very core. And that's why it seemed right to give this generation their own 'Romeo and Juliet' and not constantly get out a fuzzy VHS of Zeffirelli's version."

Quoted

Coming distractions

Pirates, blades and the Bard hit theaters

1 'Captain Phillips' Paul Greengrass — who directed the middle two, superior "Bourne" entries — does his nervy, intense shtick on the true story of Richard Phillips (Tom Hanks), a merchant mariner kidnapped by Somali pirates. He lived to sell it as a relentlessly thrilling, nail-biting movie whose ending we already know.

2 'Machete Kills' What was once a fake trailer and then an underperforming movie becomes a sequel to a film that didn't make enough money to warrant its existence. Danny Trejo returns as the ex-federal agent, this time with Lady Gaga, Charlie Sheen and Mel Gibson.

3 'Romeo and Juliet' We were going to say this seems too soon after the Leo DiCaprio-Claire Danes version. But that was 17 years ago. Anyway,"True Grit"'s Hailee Steinfeld plays Juliet while "Downton Abbey" creator Julian Fellowes cuts up the Bard's prose.

4 'Escape From Tomorrow' Insanely enough, Disney Corp., did not sue this Sundance hit — shot clandestinely inside their parks — out of existence. Randy Moore's debut finds a dad losing it during family vacation, even before things turn really weird.

5 'CBGB' The landmark NYC club that helped birth the punk and New Wave movement gets its own biopic, with a pissy Alan Rickman oddly yet ideally cast as legendary owner Hilly Kristal.

Stealing shots

Randy Moore shot "Escape From Tomorrow" in Disneyland without permits. / GETTY IMAGES

This year's Sundance Film Festival was graced with a genuine shock entry: "Escape From Tomorrow," made by first-time filmmaker Randy Moore. It was filmed on the sly inside both Disney World and Disneyland. Depicting a father's increasingly loopy meltdown while on family vacation, its creation is only slightly less amazing than the fact that Disney hasn't sued it out of existence. Instead, it comes to a theater near you.

Despite its origins, it doesn't look guerilla. It's very clean.

I did not want it to look like a found footage film, especially someone's home video that was discovered or something like that. I wanted it to have a cinematic quality, which is one of the reasons why we chose to shoot it in black and white.

high-resolution Canon 5D Mark II, which looks like a classic, regular photo camera. Was that helpful in making sure you weren't busted?
I imagine it was. Although while we were shooting we saw a bunch of college freshmen running in with a Sony EX3 on tripod legs. That's almost as big as a studio camera. And no one stopped them at all.

Disney seems to be shockingly lax about people shooting in the park. They even allow tourists to upload videos of rides to YouTube. Have you had any contact with them, that you can talk about?
I can talk about everything because I've had no experience whatsoever with them. They have not contacted me or anyone else with the production.

Did you talk to lawyers to make sure it was legal?
I didn't while I was making the film, because I knew if I did I would instantly start second-guessing story points or shots or things in general. I wanted to have a pure cut of the film, the way I wanted it, before I started to think about legal matters. Once we got a distributor that's when we started vetting the film to lawyers.

How were you directing your actors while in the park to make it look like you weren't directing them?
Very subtly. [Laughs] We'd wander up to them and say, "Maybe you should say this slower," then wander away. We rehearsed in the hotels in the morning before we'd go to the park. And we had extensive shot lists that we followed religiously. When it came time to shoot, it was just about bringing the actors, placing them there and saying, "Okay, hope you remember what we did this morning!" If we were in an area with a lot of people, I would try to limit takes to four max. We'd try to get things in two takes or three.

In between takes they just tried to look like they were on vacation?
Yeah. [Laughs]

It would seem directing children would be a bit more difficult in such high-wire circumstances.
The girl was very professional. The boy was great, too. He was younger than the girl, so he really wanted to go on the rides. That was the hardest thing sometimes, because we just didn't have time to take him all the time. We tried to keep his schedule as light as possible so his mom or dad could take him on rides when he wasn't working.

Another view

Is this based on your own experiences as a parent or a parody of family life?
I think a little of both. Certainly I've felt the same way that the characters do — all the characters. I've felt like the little boy at times, I've felt like Jim the father and gotten frustrated just like the mother. I've spent a lot of time going to those parks when I was a boy, so I have a pretty deep connection there.

AFI are back in black

Creating Havok again. Dark rockers return with their first album in more than four years.

AFI will not be doing any 10-year anniversary tours. / BWR

Since the release of their major label debut, "Sing the Sorrow," 10 years ago, AFI have solidified themselves as a band that can blend a variety of musical genres at once. Just as their look has evolved over the years, so has their music. "A good analysis would be that we're blending the pure rock feel of 'Crash Love' with the electronic elements of 'Decemberunderground,'" says singer Davey Havok about their upcoming album "Burials."

The first single is "I Hope You Suffer," which seems to have a more brutal sound than anything from "Crash Love..."
I'd say the tone and sentiment of the record is brutal throughout. "I Hope You Suffer" really represents the majority of it.

It took only six weeks to record "Burials?"
It was tense and pressurized. We had to get so much done in such a short amount of time. I'm really happy with the way it sounds. But would I have liked to have more time? Yes. There were a few other songs that I would have liked to...record.

With so many bands doing 10-year anniversary tours, did a "Sing the Sorrow" tour come up?
No, I don't think it's anything any of us would like to do. I don't really like those tours or find them genuine. It would especially be hard with that record. Going out and touring on a record that was our biggest mainstream success would seem distasteful.

AFI style

You've launched a few clothing lines over the past few years. Any fall fashion tips?
I'm a vegan and don't wear wool, and fall is a very wool-heavy season. ... But there's a lot of great vegan stuff out there. Joshua Katcher just created a line of off-the-rack suits for men that I'm very excited for.

Why You Need Physical GOLD or SILVER in Your IRA or 401(k)

Protecting your retirement nest egg is a top reason

More and more people lately have been adding physical gold and silver to their investment portfolios, especially to an existing IRA or a 401(k) from a previous employer.

That's because current gold and silver prices have created an attractive buying opportunity for those looking to preserve wealth, and who want the safety and security of a hard asset like physical gold or silver that's not going to "go out of business" like companies do, taking their stock values with them.

But how do you go about transferring a portion of your IRA or rolling over an old 401(k) into actual physical gold and silver coins and bars?

Fortunately, getting answers to the many questions investors have about gold is as easy as making a free phone call to the leading company in gold IRAs, American Bullion, at 800-369-5799. American Bullion offers a free Gold Guide that explains everything about investing in physical gold and silver in clear, plain language.

"We have a quick, safe and simple in-house system in place that's hassle-free and 100 percent tax-free, and we've helped thousands of people roll over or transfer their retirement accounts into precious metals," explained Jon Nelson, a spokesperson with American Bullion. "In fact, the entire process, including all the paperwork, can be done in about 10 minutes on the phone."

Nelson also noted to not be discouraged or surprised if your financial advisor tries to steer you away from owning physical gold or has never recommended it.

FREE "Gold Guide" available by calling 800-369-5799.

"Typically, advisors don't earn ongoing commissions when you invest in physical precious metals," said Nelson.

"Our clients often comment on how safe they feel now and how easy it was to become an owner of gold," said American Bullion's Nelson. "After all, gold has been preserving wealth for centuries, and that's not going to change anytime soon."

Call 800-369-5799 for a free copy of American Bullion's newly updated Gold Guide packed with information about adding physical gold and silver to your retirement accounts.

MIRANDA KERR

The supermodel, mom and muse of Mango's winter campaign shares her style, beauty and wellness tips.

RED LIPS AND GREEN SMOOTHIES

Days before she walked the runway at Stella McCartney and Chanel's Spring 2014 Paris Fashion Week shows, we met up with Miranda Kerr at the chic rooftop of the Gramercy Park Hotel. There, the star of Mango's new grunge-inspired fall campaign talked about her fave looks from the '90s ("An oversized blazer, ankle boots and leather jacket with studs") and let us in on her style and beauty essentials.

NYC problems

You live in New York now. Tell us about your closet space.

It's not enough! But it's good because I've gotten rid of so much stuff, I actually feel lighter. I have three little closets that I try to squeeze everything into. I've stripped it back to the basics and gave at least a room full of stuff to my friends and charity. I've also learned to maximize space. Now I fold my jeans so they sit up, so when you open the drawer you see them.

PROVIDED

You always look so well put together. How would you describe your look?
I try to go for classic and effortless and experiment a little bit depending on my mood. I like functional clothes especially, because now I'm a mom and go to the park. But when I go to work, I enjoy putting on a heel and embracing that feminine side.

How has your personal style changed since becoming a mom?
I keep it more practical now. It's all about fabrics that don't crease because I'm always holding [my son. Flynn] always wants to be in my arms or swinging on swings. I think comfort is important and wearing fabrics that make you feel good and accentuate the parts about yourself that you like. It's not necessarily about following a trend, but finding pieces that work with your body type.

If you were traveling and could only pack a small bag, what would go in?
A great pair of jeans that fits well, a blazer, a couple of T-shirts, a pair of loafers, a scarf and a hoodie — and one little black dress. I always pick up scarves at the airport, like airports in Asia, because it's not what you normally see. You'll find something different there.

You know how to rock a red lip. What are some of your beauty tips?
If I'm tired I just put on a red lip and sunglasses and it's a simple and effective way to uplift the face — just add a splash of color. Sometimes I'll use a bit of the lip color on my cheeks so I look a bit more alive — like the blood is pumping, the circulation is going. I also apply my KORA Organics lip balm to highlight my cheekbones. It makes you feel fresh.

You're a certified health coach. Any new healthy habits you've incorporated?
I have hot water and half a lemon in the morning. It's a very simple tip that cleanses the digestive system when you wake up and it really kick-starts your metabolism. Then I have a cold pressed green juice, like kale, spinach and celery with lemon, and then I have a smoothie that I make myself. I think it's really important to have a balance in life and fill your body with nutrients when and where you can, but then also know that you're a human being and you can't be too hard on yourself. I try to be 80 healthy and 20 percent indulgent. I just don't believe in depriving yourself because life is short and we're here to enjoy it.

Drink this

Kerr's smoothie ingredients

- coconut water
- chia seeds
- goji berries
- maca powder
- spirulina
- acai powder
- noni powder
- Sun Warrior protein powder

Yeah, no one likes hanging out with people who don't eat cookies.
Yeah, it's no fun. But to feel your best you have to take care of yourself. I know what to do to feel my best and be energized: my smoothie, my juice, my lemon water, getting enough sleep and drinking alkaline water throughout the day. I do mediation, yoga or Pilates four to five times a week. I also like acupuncture and massage. Be good to yourself, and then you'll be able to give a lot more to your family, to your friends and to your work.

SURPRISE! YOU'RE ALREADY IN A RELATIONSHIP

Just because you aren't "Facebook official" doesn't mean you don't have a relationship. / INGRAM PUBLISHING

For many of us, relationships seem like a big commitment, which is why we can be so hesitant about making something "official." Being in a relationship means you're accountable to the person you're sleeping with. It means that if you're unhappy you have to end it. It signifies that if you act like a jackass, your partner has the right to be upset with you.

But the truth is, these things are true whether you call your involvement with someone a "relationship" or not. Relationships don't start the second you change your Facebook status or start referring to someone as your boyfriend or girlfriend. The connection you make with someone — otherwise known as the relationship you have with them — starts at first contact: the first date, the first message or the first time you hang out. You can hook up with someone for months and call it (or not call it) whatever you want. But to say that what's going on between you two at this point is not a relationship — of some kind — is just not true.

Perhaps not defining our relationships is our way of dodging responsibility. It's like our disclaimer: If you get hurt on this ride you can't sue me — after all, we weren't technically together. But if there are still feelings involved — and there usually are — does it really matter what you call it on paper or on Facebook?

We owe it to each other to be responsible with each other's feelings — because those feelings are there, regardless of the label we affix to them. Sure, maybe you can just stop calling someone you've been on five dates with, whereas you actually have to dump someone you're "officially" dating. But label or not, ending it with someone hurts that person. When you act unreliable, it causes pain. When you disappear and reappear repeatedly, it's emotionally strenuous for the person you're stringing along.

If you're not ready to respect people's feelings, don't date and stop sleeping with people. Perhaps you're not ready to exclusively date one person, and that's fine. But don't fool yourself into thinking that not having a significant other means you're not having relationships. When you interact with another human, that is a relationship, and you owe it to that person to be respectful.

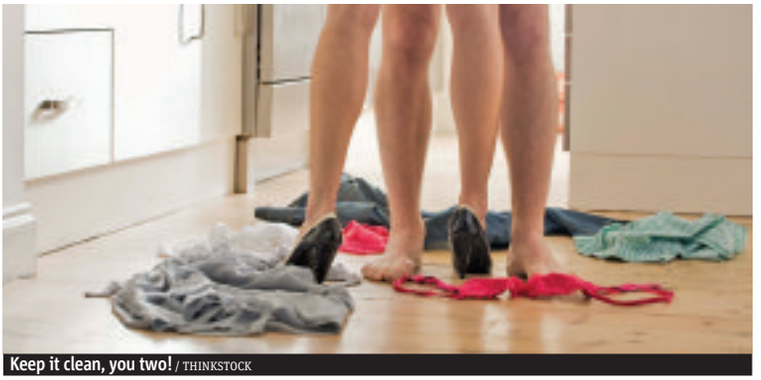
PLAY SAFE WITH YOUR TOYS

Attack of the Killer Butt Plug sounds like a horrible B-movie, but you may be surprised to learn what is in your sex toys. To give you a business owner's account of safety in this $15 billion industry, I talked with proprietor Laura Anne Stuart, MPH. With more than a decade of experience as a sexuality educator, she is currently celebrating her fifth year at the helm of Milwaukee's first woman-owned sex toy store, Tool Shed. She is part of the Progressive Pleasure Club (Progressivepleasureclub.com), a collective of sex-positive independent sex toy stores sprinkled throughout the U.S.



Keep it clean, you two! / THINKSTOCK

Tell us about your toys.
We try to carry only what we consider body-safe things, which are non-porous, non-toxic, phthalate-free and toys that are materials like 100 percent silicone, glass or stainless steel.

That sounds like what you'd use to build a Habitat for Humanity house.
[Laughs] If you're making food and you want high-quality pots, pans and utensils that are going to stand up to a lot of use, what do you have? You have stainless steel, glass, silicone, wood and others, because those are good materials that do not contain chemicals that can leak into your body. It's the same thing with toys.

Sex toy manufacturers are not required to disclose what's in their products, so how do you know what's in them?
We boil non-motorized toy [samples] for three minutes. ... If they're 100 percent silicone, they'll withstand boiling. If they're not 100 percent silicone, they'll melt, dissolve or discolor. For motorized toys, during a flame test, a silicone toy might get some soot on it. ... But it won't completely melt, catch on fire or smell terrible. The ideal thing would be to have an independent lab do a chemical analysis. But that costs like $400 to $500 per toy.

"When you get things in bulk and you have floor models sitting in your store, it gives you a different perspective than the average consumer," says Stuart. / PROVIDED

How should people clean their toys?
It depends on what your toy is made of. One of the reasons that I like silicone ... is because you can boil it to sterilize it. If the toy has a battery case or is otherwise motorized, you could spray it with antibacterial or antiviral cleaner and wipe it clean. If you put a condom over it, you don't have to worry about cleaning it because then you can just throw the condom away.

To people who use toys and never worried about safety or toxins, why should they care?
People can certainly make whatever choice they want with their bodies. I just want to make sure that they are making an informed decision.

And speaking of vibrators

Government employees receive sex toys to relieve stress

Many are suffering as a result of the government shutdown. What better time to indulge yourself, says Tom Nardone, boss of Priveco — possibly the world's most private company — who has been supplying federal employees with free dildos.

"We were talking on a Friday afternoon and the shutdown was in the news," says Nardone. "Everyone's mad with the congressmen who can't move and we thought to send them erection pills — but then we thought people are suffering and can't go anywhere because they don't know when the shutdown will end, so this is perfect."

HEY, IS THAT THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT? WELL, KIND OF. ISTOCKPHOTO

But Priveco representatives aren't just handing out their products in the nation's capital.

"We're just giving them away through our website and trusting that people are government employees — otherwise karma will get them," says Nardone. "We got through 200 in four hours yesterday, so word is spreading."

Nardone says he interested in extending his brand of charity beyond government employees.

"We have been talking about victims of natural disasters, but I guess it depends how bad it is," he says. "Any time someone is inconvenienced, we are ready to step in." METRO WORLD NEWS

Indulge in some late-night revelry at Fatty 'Cue. / PROVIDED

In the city that never sleeps, eating goes beyond normal meal times: Late night to early morning eating is expected, and thankfully, you've got plenty of options.

West Village pizza and wine bar Olio e Piu (3 Greenwich Ave., 212-243-6546) recently went 24/7. Besides serving Neapolitan style pizzas around the clock, there's a breakfast and brunch menu from 4 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jay Z's 40/40 Club (6 W. 25th St., 212-832-4040) offers full-on dinner until 4 a.m. Lobster-crab cakes, truffled angel hair pasta with colossal shrimp, braised beef short ribs with whipped potatoes and, for dessert, sweet potato doughnuts hit the spot. Private dining rooms are available, in case Jay suddenly decides to join your crew.

Renowned West Village gastro pub The Spotted Pig (314 W. 11th St., 212-620-0393) serves dinner until 2 a.m. Late-night favorites include sheep's milk ricotta gnudi with pesto and, of course, that great late-night hunger-queller, the burger. Theirs oozes Roquefort.

In Williamsburg, enjoy late night grub with a Southeast Asian twist at Fatty 'Cue (91 South Sixth St., Brooklyn, 718-599-3090). Served Thursday-Saturday from midnight until 2 a.m., the late night menu includes satisfying dishes like fermented pork riblets, noodle bowls and, more unusually, but great for a dip 'n' share: smoked catfish nam prik.

MP Taverna in Astoria (31-29 Ditmars Blvd., Queens, 718-777-2187) has a late-night happy hour featuring dollar oysters and dollar beef sliders from 11 p.m. until 1 a.m. on weekdays, and until 2 a.m. on weekends. The kitchen also offers Greek comfort food such as souvlaki and Grandma's Greek meatballs until the wee hours.

If you really need to sop up the grease of all those beers, hit SLIDE (174 Bleecker St., 212-777-9077), which has mini burgers, bacon-fat fries topped with chili salt and shaved dark chocolate, bacon-wrapped pork belly crostini and spiked ice cream shakes. SLIDE's until 1 a.m. Sunday through Wednesday, and 2 a.m. Thursday through Saturday.

The Appell of our eye

Hot chef. Stella 34's Jarrett Appell knows pizza.

Visit Appell at Stella 34 (151 W. 34th St., 212-967-9251). / EVAN SUNG

Tucked away in Macy's Herald Square (next to the bedding department), it's easy to walk right by Stella 34. But you don't want to — especially when you take a bite of the pizza there, which is overseen by executive chef Jarrett Appell. Having trained in Italy (he earned a Mastery of Italian Cuisine while there — we officially have a new diploma we want), Appell is now stateside at Stella after opening Donatella and working at Lincoln Ristorante.

Did you see those recent rankings that put New York pizza below other cities, like Boston and San Francisco?
Pizza is such a weird thing, and people have so many different opinions about it; I try not to read into it too much. I just feel like everyone has their own predetermined idea of what pizza is to them. It's one of those things that we've all been eating since we were young. And we all have different tastes and preferences in terms of what type of pizza we all want. Different styles are all good in their own right.

What's a really unexpected combination that you've found great success with for your pies?
You always go with the guide of what's seasonal, but there's certain things that I've been able to do — like we've been doing our cauliflower pizza since we opened. That's an example of something that's unique and at the same time, you're doing something that's — I wouldn't say off-the-rocker, but you're using different combinations, particularly on a pizza, with cauliflower and lemon and black pepper and stuff like that. Stuff that no one is used to eating in pizza form can lend itself very well to be used that way.

Any tips for the at-home pizza chef?
Turn up your oven to a max temperature, and preheat it until it's at its max temperature. Then when you go and put the pizza in, if you switch the oven over to a broil setting, with the broil, you're simulating what your flame would be. When you're talking pizza, particularly in a wood-burning oven, there's three primary aspects of the heat that are important. But probably the most important is your actual flame. Your flame is what rises your crust. Having the oven really, really hot will cook the bottom of the pizza and the actual dough, but putting it on broil simulates that actual flame and helps to rise the crust a lot.

Can at-home cooks make a good pizza with store-bought dough?
It depends on where you're buying your dough. If the place makes good dough, you're going to have good dough. I know of a lot of people who just go and buy dough from pizzerias in their neighborhood. We've had people come and just ask if they can buy a couple balls of dough from us, and they go home and make pizza themselves. I have a couple of buddies that do it all the time. I would be very surprised if a local pizza place wouldn't do it. Certainly every Neapolitan pizzeria would be willing to do that.

Pizza'ed out?

When you're not working, are you so sick of pizza that you can't even think about having a slice? Do you ever stop after work and have one?
I do once in a awhile. I live in Williamsburg so I spend a lot of time out there. So for a slice, I'll go to Best Pizza. They make a really good slice. But other than that, I don't eat pizza that much anywhere else. It's not that I don't crave it or want it, I just don't want to go eat other people's pizza.

Cocktail of the week

Paris Fashion Week may be over, but we're still very much into this French-tinged cocktail by Brooklyn's own Greenhook Ginsmiths. Their beach plum gin straight-up could be a cocktail in itself, but add all these other ingredients for a drink that's tres magnifique.

The Left Bank

1 oz. Greenhook Beach Plum Gin
½ oz. Yellow "Jaune" Chartreuse
½ oz. Gran Marnier or Triple Sec
½ oz. tangerine juice
Brut Champagne
Crushed ice

Method: Add Beach Plum Gin, Chartreuse, Gran Marnier and tangerine juice to mixing glass. Shake with ice. Strain into crushed ice-filled wine glass. Top with Champagne. Garnish with orange twist.

More Oktoberfest happenings

Missed our guide last month? Here are a few more ways to take part in the fun.

- 5 Napkin Burger is cooking up Beef Knockwurst Burgers throughout the month. Served on a pretzel roll, the ground beef is mixed with spices used to make Knockwurst sausages, then grilled and topped with Muenster cheese, bacon and mustard onions. Pair it with an on-tap pumpkin beer. Multiple locations, www.5napkinburger.com

- Shake Shack is getting in on the action with its eighth annual Shacktoberfest, now through Sunday. Pop by for a cheddar brat burger — a burger topped with a grilled cheddar bratwurst, ShackMeister Ale-marinated shallots and ShackSauce — or dig into Polish sausage, curry wurst or Bavarian brats. Wash it all down via a Shake Shack Bier Stein for $10, while supplies last. You can fill yours with Brooklyn Brewery's Oktoberfest brew or Shake Shack's ShackMeister Ale. Even the desserts are festive: German Chocolate Pecan Concretes and Apfelstrudel Shakes. Multiple locations, www.shakeshack.com

The health of a nation

Re: 'Tea party agenda has antebellum echoes' (Metro, Oct. 8) Letter writer Rebeca Taub should awaken from her daze and the glare of political propaganda, ever pervasive in Obamatopia. The health care industrial complex is all about big money. And, Obamacare is how to make the struggling middle class pay for these overly bloated health care-related institutions and their ivory towers. Republicans and Democrats pandering to the rich with their lobbyists. Health care in United States is an overinflated, expensive mess. And, what better way to make it worse than to put it in the hands of the federal government, with its proven record of failure in everything it gets involved in. Obamacare's "individual mandate" is nothing more than the 13th Amendment's "involuntary servitude" in disguise. A salute to the 10th Amendment. Time to move to Kentucky.
LEE KEITH, VIA EMAIL

Tea'd off about all the wrong things

Re: 'Dislike of taxes does not make one racist' (Metro, Oct. 9) Letter writer Frank Dixon seems a little oversensitive. He starts by observing that a previous writer "forgot to follow through with the liberal playbook" when she didn't call the Tea Party racist. He ends it with "TEA stands for Taxed Enough Already, which doesn't seem to be very racist in its tone, does it?" Given that accusation, why does he devote such effort to it? Perhaps instead he could devote that effort to explaining why the Tea Party is excited the government is shut down and why it claims that the U.S. shouldn't pay its obligations.

Yanks stay all in the family

MLB. For Joe Girardi, the decision to stay in pinstripes was all about being part of a family.

Girardi, here with his son in his first year as manager, said the Yankees are family. / GETTY IMAGES

The sight of Joe Girardi throwing pitches to his children at Yankee Stadium after games has become a common event.

It also is an example of how important family is to Girardi — the biggest theme he touched upon during a 30-minute conference call yesterday to discuss signing a four-year contract with the Yankees.

"There's some things that we had to work through but as I told you the last day [of the season] in Houston, my family would play an important role in this and sitting then and spending a weekend — spending a couple of days — deciding what was best for all of us, hearing what my wife wanted, what my kids wanted to do," Girardi said. "We put that all together and we're glad we're back."

Girardi was offered the deal last Friday, reportedly worth $16 million plus bonuses presumably for making the playoffs.

"It wasn't a long thought that I possibly wouldn't come back," he said, "but I had to make sure everybody was still on board."

Girardi is now the second-highest paid manager in MLB. The Angels' Mike Scioscia is in the middle of a 10-year, $50 million contract. Girardi's deal is one year longer than his previous two managerial contracts with the Yankees.

Now that he is back, Girardi could be dealing with a vastly different team. He may not have Alex Rodriguez (suspension) or Robinson Cano (free agency) and he won't have Andy Pettitte and Mariano Rivera, who have retired.

"I wouldn't have come back if I didn't think we could win a championship," Girardi said. "I know there's a lot of work to be done and I know there's a lot of holes that we have to fill and there's people leaving and there's people retiring but I have faith in our organization."

Cubs back to drawing board

By re-signing, Girardi put an end to the talk about him returning to the Cubs to manage a rebuilding project under Theo Epstein.

"If you get an opportunity to spend 10 years in one city and watch your family grow, [it's] extremely lucky and I think that's important," Girardi said. "I think stability is important."

Ground game could be Giants' cure for losing

NFL. New York ranks last in the league in rushing, and need some help from veteran Brandon Jacobs.

The Giants will need the bruising, physical running style of Brandon Jacobs if they are going to break into the win column tonight. / GETTY IMAGES

The Giants are in a rush to finally break into the win column, but in order to do that against the Bears tonight, they'll need to actually rush the ball.

It's a task easier said than done, considering the Giants' rushing attack is last in the NFL at 56.8 yards a game, while the Bears' defense is respectably ranked at No. 13 in the league in stopping the run and has only allowed three rushing touchdowns this season.

Making matters worse for the Giants is their league-worst running game, which will be without starting tailback David Wilson, who is out with a neck injury.

"Whoever is up dressed and ready to go, that's who we'll use," said offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride.

Recently re-signed Da'Rel Scott will team with aging veteran Brandon Jacobs, who looked average at best in the loss to the Eagles last week.

"My expectations, for me, are to go out and help this team win," said Jacobs. "My job is to do something that we haven't done all year long and do whatever they need me to do. Pass protect, run hard, catch, whatever they ask me to do I have to go out there and get it done."

The 11 carries Jacobs had against the Eagles were the most in a regular-season game in almost three years.

Top 3 storylines

Giants vs. Bears: Three things to watch

Things are bleak right now for Big Blue and it might not get much better as they face the Bears — co-leaders of the NFC North.

We look at what it will take to beat the Titans (8:25 p.m., NFLN/PIX11):

1 Full of turnovers
Giants quarterback Eli Manning is leading the league in interceptions (12), while the offense as a whole has committed 20 turnovers. The Bears have already forced 11 fumbles and recovered three this season. Manning and Co. could be the perfect opponent to pad the Bears' defensive stats.

2 Deuce is wild
The Bears have finally unearthed a solid No. 2 receiving option alongside franchise wideout Brandon Marshall (31 receptions, 378 yards and three scores) in Alshon Jeffery. Jeffery, who has 325 yards receiving in his last two games, including 218 yards last week, may be the hottest wideout in the league.

3 Pick your poison
Marshall and Jeffrey aren't the only offensive weapons Bears quarterback Jay Cutler has at his disposal, as running back Matt Forte also presents a serious problem for the Giants. He's tallied 375 yards on the ground and three rushing touchdowns, but also has 27 catches for 200 yards. TONY WILLIAMS

Jets talk

Sanchez's Jets future in doubt

And just like that, the Sanchise is over. Mark Sanchez is done for the season, with the Jets announcing Tuesday their fifth-year quarterback has had shoulder surgery.

There has been speculation he could be cut following the season with no money owed.

"Will he be back? He's under contract," head coach Rex Ryan said. "You're acting like he's dead. He's not dead." METRO
